Colette Miller

Artist: Colette Miller

Colette Miller's Interactive Street Art Angel Wings Project started in 2012 in Los Angeles and has since expanded with wings displayed throughout the U.S., Africa and Australia. Thousands of people have taken pictures and posted via facebook, twitter and instagram #wings worldwide. Her vision and concept for the wings is that we, here on earth can be the Angels, or "good".

Colette Miller is a Los Angeles based artist combining her platform of fine art, film studies and global experiences to foster her artistic vision. In addition to her interactive Angel Wing street art project she is directing a documentary in Kenya, Africa. She will be featured in a Ted Talks X this coming June.

Glendale Wings

AFTA is working with the artist Colette Miller to create her first ever version of 'mobile wings' constructed out of reclaimed materials. The sculpture will travel throughout the city to iconic locations creating a multitude of "identity" images for the community and visitors to share via social networks and within their own social community. GLENDALE WINGS will debut July 18th as part of Cruise Night one of the city's most prominent annual events and proceed to travel to site specific locations throughout 2015.

The stand incorporates part of a reclaimed basketball hoop stand enabling it to accommodate a variety of levels of height, enabling folks of all ages and capabilities to adorn themselves with wings. The actual feathers of the wings will be constructed from reclaimed tire shrapnel, painted and sealed.

Dimensions: stand and wingspan extend to 72" h x 65"w, steel base 32"x36"
